

Citizens must have access to varied sources of news and different points of view in order to intelligently exercise their rights and duties in a democracy. Concentration of sources of information in the hands of a few large organizations will make that impossible.